

Thinking Politically

- 2 25th Anniversary of the Earth Day Wall Street Action
Paul Messersmith-Glavin wants to talk about just how profound a restructuring of society is required.
- 4 Who Owns the Streets?
Brentin Mock explains that police use jaywalking and loitering laws to jail or remove marginalized people from public spaces.
- 6 McDonald's in Old Havana?
Marce Cameron realizes that Cuban citizens remain deeply committed to the revolution's core principles.
- 8 A Primer on Gramsci, Culture, and Climate Change
Dylan Harris says that a hegemonic society is one in which an ideology has become so normalized that it is difficult for people to imagine alternatives.
- 11 Whitman's Socialism
R. Burke reviews John Marsh's In Walt We Trust: How a Queer Socialist Poet Can Save America from Itself.

Less of What We Don't Need

- 13 Disconnecting the Minerals-Energy-Climate Dots
Patrick Bond documents that more than 182 million Africans are expected to die prematurely by 2100 thanks to GHGs.
- 17 Renewable Energy Isn't a Shortcut to Reversing Global Warming
Pete Dolack understands that an ever expanding economy will ultimately use more energy, more resources.
- 20 Climate Justice: Uniting Struggles Across Latin America
Cory Fischer-Hoffman reports that 80% of known fossil fuels must stay in the ground.

Thinking Economically

- 34 The Birth of Revolutionary Medicine in Cuba
Don Fitz recognizes that the consciousness of 3000 Cuban doctors who stayed became a material force in the production of health care.
- 41 NPR's Gas Pains
Stan Cox believes that a more meaningful headline would be: "Natural Gas: Not Quite as Dirty as Coal".
- 43 The World Bank's Development Model and Indigenous Peoples
Mark Kernan warns that "reform" and "growth," the two great euphemistic shibboleths of neo-liberalism, are back.
- 46 Global Warming Is Economic Imperialism
Rob Urie precautions that gas "fracking" and nuclear power have different externalities, not fewer.

Biodevastation

- 24 Africa: How the IMF Worsens Ebola
Jérôme Duval advocates cancelation of the external debt of West African countries affected by Ebola.
- 25 How Green Is Your Pot?
Kolibri terre Sonnenblume notes that marijuana is resource-hungry and labor intensive.
- 29 Barry Commoner and the Great Acceleration
Ian Angus emphasizes both that production and pollution have increased since 1945 and their character has changed.
- 32 "Climate Smart Agriculture" Is a Dangerous Hoax
La Via Campesina observes that the agricultural activity which has most contributed to GHGs has been industrial production.